"Sand painting comes from a long tradition of sacred and temporary art. Sand is quintessentially about time. These pieces are about the transience of community.

They touch on my favorite themes: media, exploitation, high art and social drama."

-- Wayne Coe

Commemorating the 25th anniversary of the close of the Broadway male porn district and the 40th anniversary of Warhol's coupling of male exploitation hyperbole to Fine Art marketing (with the opening of X-rated films LONESOME COWBOY and FLESH at the 55th Street Playhouse), Wayne Coe executes site-specific sand paintings at related art world locations.
